COMMONWEALTH SPORT CANADA IS LOOKING FOR PERSONNEL COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Do you have Human Resources expertise? Are you aware of Ontario's Employment Standards Act (ESA)? We would like to hear from you. If you are interested or would prefer more information, please email Trevino Betty at tbetty201@gmail.com.

TEAM CANADA SET TO COMPETE AT THE 2023 COMMONWEALTH YOUTH GAMES

The Canadian Team has been selected!

The seventh Commonwealth Youth Games will take place on the Islands of Trinidad and Tobago between 4-11 August 2023. 1000+ athletes and para athletes between the ages of 14-18 will participate in seven sports managed by 500+ officials. The Commonwealth Youth Games can be a valuable springboard for the stars and leaders of tomorrow, contributing to the further development of youth sport throughout Canada and the Commonwealth. The sports will take place across Trinidad and Tobago, bringing a diverse perspective of the twin island country to the nations of the Commonwealth, as well as showcasing a festival of the country's activities. Team Canada will compete in Athletics, Beach Volleyball, Netball and Rugby 7s fielding a team of 74 athletes and staff.

SPORTWORKS AND THE TRINBAGO 2023 COMMONWEALTH YOUTH GAMES

Working closely with the Organizing Committee, the local community, and Games volunteers, CSC SportWORKS Officers are involved in all facets of the planning, delivery, and evaluation of the 2023 Commonwealth Youth Games being held in Trinidad and Tobago.

SportWorks Officer, Emily Metituk has been posted to Trinidad as Sport Entries Lead and Tyler Powell has joined the Accreditation Team.

The 2023 Commonwealth Youth Games, officially known as the VII Commonwealth Youth Games and informally as Trinbago 2023, will be held in Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago in 2023. They will be the seventh edition of the Commonwealth Youth Games. The games were initially scheduled for August 2021 but were postponed and now will be held from 4 to 11 August 2023 as a result of the global COVID-19 pandemic and scheduling issues with the 2020 Summer Olympics and the 2022 Commonwealth Games. Trinbago 2023 will comprise seven sports and will be held in two clusters, one in Trinidad and the other in Tobago. The seven sports are Swimming, Athletics, Cycling, Fast5 Netball, Rugby Sevens, Triathlon and Beach Volleyball.

Canadian SportWORKS Officers will assist with the planning and preparation of the Commonwealth Youth Games. Specific project focus will include assisting with the planning of Games community legacy projects as well as working to assist the Games medical team with set-up / preparations for the Games. CSOs will also assist with other Games-related planning projects and will work in concert with interns from the CGF's equip internship program.

COMMONWEALTH SPORT CANADA JOINS ABUSE-FREE SPORT

COMMONWEALTH SPORT CANADA is pleased to announce that it has signed an agreement to join Abuse-Free Sport, the new independent program to prevent and address maltreatment in sport.

CSC and its members (Board, Members-at-Large, Committee Members and Staff) will now have access to the services of the Office of the Sport Integrity Commissioner (OSIC), which serves as the central hub of Abuse-Free Sport.

"CSC recognizes that safe sport is everyone's responsibility. We're fully committed to doing our part to support a growing national movement that is changing the culture of sport in this country. As part of that commitment, we're pleased to sign on to Abuse-Free Sport and to have the OSIC to administer our safe sport complaints," Claire Carver-Dias, CSC

President said. “The sport community has been asking for just this kind of consistent national program. It’s an important step forward for everyone involved in sport in Canada.”

CSC has completed the full adoption of the Universal Code of Conduct to Prevent and Address Maltreatment in Sport (UCCMS), which it must do when becoming part of the Abuse-Free Sport program, and has made the required policy changes.

There is more information about the Abuse-Free Sport program HERE, on the OSIC HERE, and on Commonwealth Sport Canada HERE.

CANADIAN COMMONWEALTH GAMES BID

Alberta Community Builders to Explore Bringing 2030 Commonwealth Games to Province

Alberta is provided the opportunity to bid for the 2030 Commonwealth Games

A group of Alberta community builders have been working to explore the possibility of hosting the 2030 Commonwealth Games through a unique opportunity focused on strategic partnerships and cost sharing options.

These community leaders, including those from business, sport, culture and academia, have been collaborating over three years with potential partners, venue operators, technical experts, and community advocates to do the foundational work required to complete a feasibility assessment to bring the Commonwealth Games to communities throughout the province. Numerous discussions have been held with Commonwealth Sport Canada and the international Commonwealth Games Federation.

To date, this evaluation and planning has been funded entirely by community donations. All government partners will now invest in the project as it transitions into an official exploration phase.

The Commonwealth Games, often referred to as the Friendly Games, is a multi-sport and cultural event that takes place every four years, bringing together 74 Commonwealth nations and territories. The Games consist of 4,500 athletes, including para sport athletes, competing in 20 summer sport disciplines.

The Games would be held over 11 days in August, 2030 with competitions and cultural events shared between Calgary, Edmonton, Tsuut'ina Nation, the Bow Valley and other Alberta communities.

S4N Edmonton: The Sustainability of Partnerships

July 5, 2023 - Edmonton, Alberta

Written by: Sarah Smith, SportWORKS Officer, S4N Edmonton

Accessibility in sport can seem like an insurmountable task when viewed alone. Barriers can pile up quickly; having reliable transportation to get back and forth from practices and games, enough funding to pay your way through the ever increasing costs, battling through systems that are not always created to best fit the participant. Now, if you add being new to the country, not know the language, not always fitting the mold of what is expected, racial differences, and potentially starting your chosen sport later than others due to extenuating circumstances, you can see how these barriers pile up to a point where you do not have the adequate means to try. This is the value of the Commonwealth Sport Canada's Sport for Newcomers Initiative (S4N), partnering with organizations such as ours, Action for Healthy Communities (AHC), to help deliver as "barrier free" programming as is possible to our target audience: newcomers to Canada. But are we doing our job if after we have completed our project, we are no longer developing these same opportunities?

This question of sustainability has been central to our thinking during this second round with CSC. After completing the first year of the S4N Initiative, AHC was able to leverage some of our experience into research around barriers for newcomers. Part of this research included developing connections with sport organizations across the city of Edmonton in order to better understand everyone's experiences and knowledge on providing accessible programming. Through these connections and partnerships, we have been able to have valuable conversations on the differences between where some sports are at and where newcomers meet them. Take for example the national pastime of many Canadians:

Most Canadians know first hand the many barriers that exist for everyone when trying to play the popular Canadian sport. For some, those barriers have prevented the opportunity to play. However, Edmontonians still grew up in the cosmos that is Oilers fandom here in Edmonton. Like many Canadian cities, the NHL fandom is all encompassing. It is what makes the city breathe, yell, proclaim, despair, cheer, and sulk. There have been many bright days that have felt dull due to a disappointing season (decade of darkness anyone?), and, conversely, some dull days that have felt bright as ever due to playoff magic (thank you McJesus!). Now, not everyone in the city is as enamoured with Goilers fever as others. Even if they are not, it is hard to miss seemingly every car sporting an Oilers flag, every restaurant loudly blaring the current game, and the constant chatter and hum on the street after an exciting win. Let alone if you live downtown and hear the roar of the Moss Pit and honking of cars as the crowds exit the latest watch party. It is safe to say that Canadian NHL markets in general have not had to market their teams to a new, unknowing, audience in a very long time. All this to say, when introducing newcomers to the quintessential Canadian pastime, where do you start? How do you continue?

We started at the basics. Before the skating lessons and the hockey equipment. Without the hardwired orange and blue flowing through the veins. Stick in hand, movable goal on ground, and ball in the street. Ball Hockey. Now, ball hockey negates a lot of the barriers that exist within the sport such as technical skating skills, professionalization of the sport and leagues making it hard to join, cost & time commitments, etc. However, even at its basic structure, the piece of community connection is still missing. The heart of the program is gone. While we can teach the enjoyment of the game, it still does not explain the rest. Cue, the Oilers themselves.

Edmonton Oilers Alumnus Mark Fistric answering questions from students at Ross Sheppard High School about hockey, playing with the Oilers, and so much more!

One of the developed partnerships over the past year and continuing to today is with the Oilers Alumni group. They have volunteered their time and energy to come out and help some of our newcomers learn the sport of hockey, talk about and answer questions on all things Oilers, and play ball hockey with our youth. By doing so, they have opened the door to Rogers place. This still leaves us in a predicament, however. While we at AHC have resources to connect newcomers to opportunities, and provide social learning and community connection, we do not have the resources or the capacity to hire a bunch of coaches for different sports continuing past our dedicated Try-It days. Instead, we have reached out to sport organizations that have already done the work to create a system that lowers barriers and brought them into the connection point. For us this has been Free Play – an organization in Edmonton that works to provide opportunities for low-income youth across the city to participate in sport, develop their social learning, and have a safe space to try new things. Our youth fit within the requirements of their organization for participants which makes them a perfect fit. When our youth join the program they are trying a new skill and learning the cultural relevance of the sport they are playing, while learning from coaches and programs that can continue that opportunity if the participant so chooses.

For us, the connection between AHC, professional sport organizations, and community recreational sport, is the ultimate display of the power of our organization. It takes the desire of our clients to better understand their new community and provides them both the opportunity to learn and the chance to continue that learning. Along the way, we also create a new avenue for life long activity and sport experiences. At least, that is the goal – one that we can hopefully reach this summer and during the upcoming busy month of July!

'Til next month, when we wrap up our S4N Edmonton Initiative in style!

Sarah

ALUMNI PROFILE

Margie Schuett

Volunteer - 1980 to 2006

A long-time community service volunteer and experienced sports leader, Margie has participated in numerous capacities within the amateur sports environment at the Olympic, Pan Am, Commonwealth Games and World Championships; Chair of the Camp Cadicasu Association of Calgary, Founding Board Member of Motivate Canada, and was involved as an original member of a team serving as athlete advisor during the establishment of Athletes CAN. Her volunteer commitment to mentoring and supporting athletes in securing personal sponsorships and marketing support continues today.

During her 26 years with the CSC, Margie has served in various positions in significant ways. Beginning in 1980, Margie represented the corporate sponsor of Sears Canada, who supplied the non-competitive clothing for the 1982 Commonwealth Games in Brisbane. From there, an opportunity was offered and accepted to join the Board as Director and Vice President; she served in many volunteer positions from Director, Chair of the Games Business Unit, and Mission Staff Member in 1982, 1990, 1994, 2002, and 2006 as well as Chef de Mission in 1998 in Kuala Lumpur Malaysia. During this time, Margie also was a member of the 1996 through 1984 Winter and Summer Olympic Teams and the 1979, 1983, and 1987 Pan Am Teams. Margie also had a twenty-year run serving as a Chef de Mission for Team Canada at the World Aquatics Championships through to 2019.

Coming from the corporate community as Sears Canada's National Fashion Director for women's fashions and accessories, National Director of Corporate Marketing for all men's, women's and children's fashion and accessory departments and finally as National Director of Marketing for Sponsorships Margie played a crucial role in linking her experience and contacts to CSC. Her volunteer commitment as a Vice President, Member of the Commonwealth Games Foundation, Chair of the Games Operations Business Unit, representing the CSC at the 1996 and 2006 Federation General Assemblies and in the CSC Sport Development programs was extensive and helpful in supporting millions of dollars valuable in-kind product and services to the CSC. Margie accepted the challenge of assisting countries like Vanuatu, Cayman Islands, Bermuda, Turks and Caicos and Gibraltar to secure sponsorships for non-competitive clothing for the 2006 games in Melbourne, developing mission operations materials and business development guidelines for developing countries with limited experience in planning and sponsorship development.

One of the most significant contributions Margie has made is in creating much more focus on creating an inclusive environment recognizing athletes' participation in critical matters, including board representation, overseeing the implementation of processes in representing their team member rights during a competition related to issues involving team discipline, Flag Bearer selection, Mission Staff operations and ensuring balance of female representation in coaching Commonwealth Games sports. Over 20 innovative initiatives related to a growing role for athletes' involvement at the Board table and Games competitions were a significant source of pride for Margie during her time with CSC.

Margie was included in the McClelland & Stewart publication of "Heroes in our Midst" - a collection of 110 personal stories from Canada's top athletes and sports people who have participated at the elite sporting competition level. The stories offer a private window into a world few people know about. Most recently, Margie was profiled in the book "Shattered Hopes", a collection of stories from athletes, coaches and others affected by the 1980 Olympic boycott written by Sheila Robertson.

As a Commonwealth Games Federation Award of Merit inductee, Judy Kent said of Margie when she was given the 2016 Canadian Commonwealth Sport Award of Merit: "My first impressions of Margie were 'what a presence'... she was the centre around which so much revolved.....she was the heart of so many things, and she could talk to anybody, and they would love her. And these are the kind of leaders you need to make a change...."
